

TCM Iridology Diagnosis and Treatment Case Study:

The Case of One “Blind” Eye

Robert Wu, O.M.D., Ph.D., L.Ac.

During one of my TCM Iridology Diagnosis and Treatment seminar this year, I came across an interesting case that I would like to share with everybody. In my seminar I would usually lecture and then provide some hands on diagnosis for the interested audience. Seeing is believing, in that way, the audience will be able to judge whether the “method” I used will confirm their health condition(s).

A middle age lady approached me and asks me if I would give an Iridology diagnosis for her mother. Due to the age of her mother, I decided to give priority to this elderly lady. Her daughter told me her mother is blind in one of her eyes, and asked me if I would stay after the seminar to see her mom instead. Intrigued, I complied with her request.

The patient is an 85-years-old Hispanic woman. There was no history of trauma, brain problems, tumor, or eye disease to speak of. I used my Iridology Diagnosis Computer Software to capture both her right and left iris. Her right iris revealed she just had cataract surgery. There were also a few blue and black spots on her iris, indicated the damage cause by long-term use of western medication.

The patient’s left iris was not constricted as expected. It was very clear there are definite pathological changes in her stomach and intestines area. Interestingly, this “blind” person’s major issues were of the stomach and intestine.

Upon further inquiry, the patient described the vision I her left eye is in the form of a vertical “black line”, with very little perception of light. I have formulated a working diagnosis in the back of my mind. I then proceeded to palpate her left carotid artery and left vertebral artery area, reaffirming my suspicion.

Discussion:

This is a very interesting case for me for several reasons. First, we have an elderly person with one supposedly blind eye without any obvious pathology. Secondly, the TCM Iridology Diagnosis method and computer software combing with my clinical experience, I have pinpointed the cause of her called “blindness” is a result of malnutrition contributes to arteriosclerosis of her arteries. Sp without proper blood supply and nutrients going to her left eye, her vision is severely compromised.

Following me diagnosis, I started to treat her neck with my “Dao Qi”, “Guiding the Energy” needling method along her gallbladder, stomach, and large intestine point around her neck and face. I have also prescribed her my own herbal blend formula. In her second treatment, the patient described a sensation of energy “rushing up” her head in to her left eye. After the treatment, I checked the peripheral vision of the patient. She was able to “see” out of the corner of her left eye and that she can see “light”. With the follow visits, the patient was able to “see” out of her left eye gradually.
